Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Longmans English Classics: Macaulay s Speeches on Copyright, and Lincoln s Cooper Institute Address Thomas Babington Macaulay was born at Rothley Temple, Leicestershire, October 25, 1800. On his father s side he descended from an excellent line of Scotch Presbyterians - many of whom were ministers. His father, Zachary, was a stern hero who never quite tted into his environment. He reminds one of Carlyle in that he had great ideas always gnawing at his heart, but unlike Carlyle he could not express the thoughts that strove for utterance. He went to Jamaica as a bookkeeper for a Glasgow firm. While there he became so disgusted with negro slavery that he refused an excellent salary to remain, and returned home, when twenty-four years old, to devote the remainder of his life to ghting negro slavery in the British colonies. Macaulay s mother, Selina Mills, was of Quaker birth, and possessed an affectionate nature, Well tempered with a clear vision of what was best for her children and a firm resolution to carry her program to a successful conclusion. Certainly, Macaulay s birth promised much. While yet a small child Macaulay displayed a remarkable precocity. He was a great reader and an inveterate talker. This precocity might easily have been his ruin, but his clear-headed mother guided him so intelligently that there was never a sign of spoiling. An interesting instance of his premature mental development is that told of a visit to the house of a friend when he Was only four years old. A servant unfortunately spilled some hot coffee over the boy s legs. The hostess Was, naturally, very compassionate and did all...
