On that magnificent temple wrought ten thousand workmen, whose payment, in pieces of fine silver, was never delayed beyond the evening. The emperor himself surveyed each day their progress, and encouraged their diligence by his rewards. Fame praises the architects who hung those wondrous domes in air. The hundred columns, the rich and variegated marble pavements, the pillars of green and purple, the jaspers and the porphyries, were offerings from Asia Minor, from Greece, from Africa, from Gaul; and no ship might sail from the harbors of the empire, if it brought not back a tribute to the glory of the temple. In that proud capital, the cross has been displaced by the crescent, and that Christian temple is now the shrine of the Turk, the mosque of the...
